CHICAGO-(BUSINESS WIRE)-July 15, 2003-Any corrective activity should be limited, according to Dan Sullivan. His technical analysis and four recent recommendations will poise investors for the next run. Learn about Adtran Inc. (NASDAQ:ADTN), EMC Corp. (NYSE:EMC), Nextel Communications (NASDAQ:NXTL), UTStarcom Inc. (NASDAQ:UTSI), Motorola (NYSE:MOT), and Yahoo (NASDAQ:YHOO). Here are the highlights from the Featured Expert column:

As Dan Sullivan and his team go to press, the market is selling off in the throes of Yahoo's (NASDAQ:YHOO) disappointing earnings. Actually they weren't all that bad, but analysts were expecting more. In Dan's opinion, the market might correct at this juncture, but he's betting that any corrective activity at this point is going to be limited, possibly in the neighborhood of 5% at the worst. He says this because The Chartist 90% Rule flashed a rare buy signal on Wednesday, June 4th.

Fundamentals on Recent Recommendations

Adtran Inc. (NASDAQ:ADTN) supplies innovative network access products that enable widespread digital telecommunications applications, including Internet access, telecommuting, corporate connectivity, video-conferencing and teleradiology. Sales for the first quarter ended March 31, rose 3.5% to $86.2 million compared with $83.3 million a year earlier. Net income increased 143% to $10.5 million and/or .11 cents a share or 27 cents a share versus $4.3 million.

EMC Corp. (NYSE:EMC) is the world's leader in information storage systems, software, networks and related services. With data storage and protection continuing to be a top priority for most companies, analysts expect revenue to increase about 15% in 2003 compared to 23% decrease in 2002. Earnings per share should be around 12 cents following a loss of 5 cents last year.

Nextel Communications (NASDAQ:NXTL) is a leading provider of fully integrated, wireless communication services in the United States. It uses the Motorola (NYSE:MOT) based, integrated Digital Enhanced Network (iDEN), to provide exceptional sound and transmission quality. Its handsets offer a wide range of features in sharp demand by consumers. It ended 2002 with 10.6 million subscribers, an increase of about 23% since the end of 2001.

UTStarcom Inc. (NASDAQ:UTSI) is a global provider of wireless and wireline access and Internet protocol switching solutions. Sales and profits surged sharply in the first quarter ended March 31, 2003. Due largely to strong sales in China, earnings leapt 113% to $37.3 million, or 33 cents compared to $17.5 million or 15 cents a year earlier. The results topped analyst's estimates by 6 cents. Sales jumped 80% to $330.5 million from $183.7 million.
